- (a) Comprehension Passages

Read the following comprehension passages and answer the following questions
Passage 1

All languages are systematic and rule bound. Children across the world acquire their natural language in same manner. In this context, linguistics is not simply the study of foreign languages. It is the scientific, organized and systematic study of a language. Linguists examine and evaluate language on the basis of words, sentence, word order, pronunciation to discuss the internal language mechanism. Generally people understand that a linguist can speak many languages. However there is big difference between a linguist and a polyglot. India as a case in example has six distinct language families. It is estimated that approx. seventeen hundred languages are spoken in India only. Hindi is a rich language but does not still have a national language status in terms of official usage although it is official language for some states. English is official language for most other states.

Most countries have only one language besides Canada where French and English both are official languages. In the western world, countries are strongly associated with single languages and vice versa. Linguists see this due to the rise of nation states in the past few centuries where single languages attained official status in individual countries, English in the United Kingdom, French in France, Italian in Italy, etc. However beneficial the official status of one language may be for a modern country in terms of government, public discourse, higher education, etc., it is not helpful to other languages which may be found within the borders of a particular country. In many aspects language represents our identity and culture. Furthermore, even in countries where only one language is spoken, say Dutch in the Netherlands, there may well be different dialects of this language closely related to the national language. Even within Europe, and most certainly outside of it, the equation of one country with one language breaks down. Switzerland is a good example of a country where a single national identity exists across three major and one minor speech community: Swiss German, French, Italian and Rhaeto-Romance. Beyond Europe it is more the rule than the exception for countries to have several languages within their borders. One need only think of such countries as India and China or Siberian Russia to see how many languages can be integrated into a single state. In such instances, there is of course an official language which serves the function of a lingua franca, that is, a language which is used as a means of communication among those groups who do not speak each others language.

Question 10:(a) Précis Writing

Read the following passages and write a précis for the same.

The word 'gender', originally a grammatical term, has come to refer to the social roles and behavior of individuals arising from their classification as biologically male or female. In other words, Gender is general terms is imported from the social sciences for the sex or sexuality of human beings. Hence 'gender difference', of a difference in speech between men and women; language and gender, as a branch of sociolinguistics dealing with such differences. This is a huge complex embracing virtually all aspects of social behavior of which language is only one. Recently, intensive research has been carried out about the relationship of language and gender, largely by female scholars who have felt drawn to the topic because of the obvious discrimination against women that has taken place in the past and which can still be observed today. The initial impulse was the work of the American linguist Robin Lakoff, who in the early 1970s focussed her attention on certain themes with the language and gender complex above those that she rightly felt required rectification. Her work stimulated other scholars to engage in this study and soon language and gender was a burgeoning research area in universities across the western world. Various opinions emerged on this relationship with two gaining particular focus. One is the difference approach which established that male and female language is dissimilar in spoken as well as written without attributing this to the nature of the social relationship between men and women. The other is the dominance approach which saw language usage by females and males as reflecting established relationship of social control of the latter over the former. With the maturation of research on language and gender the simple 'difference – dominance' dichotomy was increasingly regarded as unsatisfactory and insufficiently nuanced. For example, to maintain that men have a competitive style of social behavior in western countries is a generalization that everyone would agree. However, there are men who are not competitive in this respect. There are common tendencies that one comes across such as men interrupt women more, women are more communicative than men, women gossip more than men, men speak more comfortably in public and are good in calculation than women.
